On November 20,2025 the students of Semester V History Minor took part in the Fishbowl kind of teaching learning on the topic Transition Debate. They students were divided into different groups and studied the different debates on the decline of feudalism. Each group discussed enthusiastically one strand of the debate with the rest of the class listening intently and also participating and asking questions. The students felt that this method of learning was more effective than the standard lecture method of teaching as it rendered the subject more interesting and made it easier for students to retain.
