The students of Semester 1 Major were divided into five groups. They were asked to make a group presentation on the features of Jainism, Buddhism or the Ajivika sect, which are a part of their DSCC 1 course (Module V, Cultural transitions). The students were given around ten days to prepare and each presentation was to be around 10-12 minutes. They could use the smart board and make either a PPT, a quiz, a podcast etc to present their findings. Some of the students were enthusiastic and made good use of visual aids in their presentations. Many of them demonstrated good presentation skills. However, some felt shy or were nervous to speak in front of their peers. Some were not confident of their content and fumbled while presenting. The session was a learning experience for them and it is hoped that as they proceed to the following semesters, their presentation skills will improve.
